Tall Pine Only 3 Years Old

Loblolly is "high as an elephant's eye" in this half-acre of pine woodland planted by Clifford E. Franklin, Rt. 3, Appomattox (right). Checking the very fast growth in this three-year old stand is Warren Taylor, Appomattox county forester (left). Mr. Franklin has recently retired from the staff of the State Forests, Virginia. He spent 22 years planting trees, helping fight fires, working with all types of heavy equipment and being an ardent promoter for conservation, including trees and wildlife. He says that anyone with even a little land not in profitable use can plant pines. It's a good way to save the land and to earn extra income. Mr. Franklin is planning to sow wildlife seed in between the pine rows. The grove of hardwoods behind the pines holds plenty of birds and game who will enjoy it, he says, and come fall that will make for happy hunting!

Rosetta Berkeley

Typewriter Is Her At School

Rosetta Berkeley, ninth grader at Appomattox County High School, is happy about the two "A's" on her latest report card, but she is even happier about a typewriter loaned to her through the Audio-Visual Dept. of the school with cooperation from the school's counseling service.

Rosetta, who had cataracts removed from her eyes when she was very young has a visual handicap, but is doing her best to overcome this through hard work and study. Last summer she was part of a summer educational enrichment program for 16 visually handicapped girls and boys at the University of Virginia. Rosetta and the others, through funds under Title VI of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, went on field trips to Monticello and Massanutten Mountain and had a full program of academic studies and physical education.

She is writing a series of articles on the subjects of pollution, crime and conservation, hoping to have them published in the Times Virginian as a student writer. One article has already been published. Rosetta says that looking at television news coverage gives her ideas for articles.

Like most teenagers she enjoys listening to rock music on the radio, and as to the future, she hopes to be a "special education teacher."

She says she is especially grateful to Mrs. G. L. James, Mrs. Margaret Shields, Major W. W. Wallis, Mrs. Estaline McCraw and others in the school system who have helped secure the typewriter to help her with homework and whose interest and concern aid her in her education.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Berkeley of Pamplin. She has two brothers and one brother, Alvin, is blind and wear glasses, has also, fortunately, has an eye condition as Rosetta.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Aurelious A. Baldwin who died 23 years ago, April 12, 1970.
God saw the road was getting rough,
The hills were hard to climb,
He gently closed his loving eyes,
And whispered "Peace be thine."

What is home without a father,
All things this world may send,
But when I lost my father,
I lost my dearest friend.

To those who have a father,
Treat him with loving care,
You'll never know his value,
Until you see his vacant chair.
Sadly missed by his daughter,
